It is not going to be so expensive to see the World's Fair unless one wishes to spend money. The best way will be to get a room in some good house, of which there will be thousands, serving breakfast and supper and furnishing the room for $2.50 a day for two persons. That will be $1.25 apiece and with dinner at the fair grounds and admission to the grounds will run the day's expense to about $2.50 for each person, exclusive of car fare. For $5 a day a visitor can see the fair and go to the theatre at night and have a margin of a dollar or better for nigars, etc. On $30 a week a man can see the Fair and not have a dull time. Many a visitor will get along well on $15 a week. There will be thousands of splendid boarding houses which will rent rooms by the day and give breakfast and supper for $2.50 or $3 for two. The rooms will be well furnished and just as pleasant as at a first-class hotel. Most people will prefer an arrangement of this kind. Those who do not have to be economical can stop at the Auditorium, the Great Northern and such hotels, for from $5 to $15 a day. The hotels will have all that they can accommodate at their regular rates and they have posted notices stating that they will not raise the prices during the fair.

The Alliance in Politics.

COLUMBIA, S. C., February 20,-The State Farmers' Alliance is now beginning to look ahead in a political way and prepare for the changed political condilons of two years hence. It is safe to say that the Alliance men are beginning to see in the wage earners' movement a speck on the horizon which is destined to work the downfall of the farmers' movement of the past, and they are now going o prepare to meet the emergency by forming a closer Alliance with the Till-

I had a very interesting talk with one of the leading Alliance men of the State this morning, and he tells me a great many things about the Alliance and its movements. It will be remembered that the annual meeting of the Alliance this year is to be held at Clemson College, about the time for the opening of that institution. The date is July 26. The meeting will be held on the first day at Clemson, and will then adjourn to Walhalls. The Alliance men, it seems, want to see the farmers' college in all its glory. So far no candidate has appeared in the field for the presidency. It is thought that President Donaldson will be re-

The Allianceman referred to says tha the membership of the Order is now steadily growing. In regard to the future of the Order in politics he said: "The Alliance is not going to play very greatly different part in politics to that it is right now playing. It is going to boss things like it is now doing so far as its demands are concerned, or rather, it is going to get those who are sympathizers with it into official positions. We have by no means given up the fight so far as our political interests are concerned. This, of course, is not a campaign year, but when the time comes we will most certainly make the fight that we have made in the past-very likely on a larger scale. I don't see that Cleveland's election will affect the political future of the Alliance. I have had my mind made up for rome time in regard to Cleveland's policy, but some of his recent appoint-

The whole cause for this withdrawal from the State, as explained by Col. D. P. Duncan, the manager of the State Alliance Exchange, is that the company, after a sufficient trial, bas decided that it cannot longer continue such a credit business as it is necessary to do with the farming classes in this State. The company is ready to continue its operations in South Carolina on a cash basis, but

Hagood Get Out. CHARLESTON, S. C., February 24 .- The festive gilt-edge Barnwell bigamist, Colonel A. E. Besides the two wives contributed by Charleston, Miss Alley and Miss Beauderot, it is said that he married a widow here two years ago under the name of Coyle, and leaving ber three months after the wedding, sent her a Philadelphia paper announcing his leath. It is also said that he married a Miss Atkins in Pineopoles, an aristocratic settlement in Berkley county, some years ago, and another in Orangeburg county. Miss Beck, his Savannah wife, is well known here, having lived here about twenty years ago. She had entered the convent, and was preparing to take the veil when she fell heir to some property and gave up the idea. Then she married

The colonel used to travel through this State buying cattle and horses, and is well known over the State. His arrest has caused a great sensation. Public opinion denounces the small amount of bail fixed for his release, and there are some who do not hesitate to say that the whole thing was a put-up job to get him

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 25.-Major Hagood, the distinguished matrimonial plunderer, and his Atlanta wife skipped out of the city before the ink on their bail bond was dry, and had twelve hours start before the Savannah wife thought of telegraphing to the police authorities here to hold the Major. The general belief here is that the Major has been paid out of the scrape by the Atlanta wife and that the case of bigamy preferred against him will never be tried. This belief is grounded on the extremely low amount fixed for the bail bond-one thousand dollars-which it is thought the Atlanta wife will cheerfully pay for the release of her gilt-edged husband.

Tunneling for Liberty.

ATLANTA, Feb. 20 .- A marvelous story f how a convict gang, confined in the Dade coal mines, tunneled for months and months through the mountain side, and at last bored their way to liberty, is told by John Moore, a netorious murderer, who was recently betrayed at Tampa, Fla., by a female companion.

When Moore arrived at the mines, h was put to work in the shaft where Guy McLain, Tom Delk and others were at work. Thirteen months before Moore's arrival, McLain, who was sent up from Brunswick for highway robbery, had formed a plan for escape and he and other convicts were working on it every

No guards were kept on the inside of the mine, and after the convicts had finished their daily tasks, they were permitted to roam at will through the dark to the stockade came. In a cavern from which the coal had been taken, McLain began working up toward daylight.

In thirteen months he tunneled fifteen feet. When Moore arrived the plans were changed. McLain was boring to the side of the mountain and Moore decided to turn the shaft straight up. Every day one of the men worked in the tunnel.

Dynamite was used and the dirt had to be pulled slowly down to the cavern, where it was stowed away. Finally daylight was reached and the men prepared for the escape. Moore passed through the tunnel first, closely followed by Delk and McLain. It took these men three hours to crawl through. The other convicts were right behind them.

To cut a long story short, a deal was made by which Davenport was to become the possessor of two gold bricks, which the Indian displayed, for $3,500. He insisted, however, on having an analysis iewelry firm in the city. To this Hines Hines then conducted Davenport to a hotel and submitted the samples to a man named Dayton, who examined them and claimed to be a government assayist. The latter pronounced them to be of 24 carat gold. Davenport was satisfied with this assurance and secured the $3,500, which he paid to the Indian in the woods. I have seen letters commenced somehing like this: "dear friend, I seat myself and take my pen in hand to write you a few lines to let you know," &c., but I can beat that now, for I can take my pen and ink both in hand. I tell you it's a great convenience, and a great help, too-one of these fountain pens are-for when you get up a good chain of thought and begin to spread it out over paper through a pen it some times breaks that line of thinking to have to stop to dip your pen in the ink, but these fountain pens does away with all that. So that when you start out you need not stop for anything. I don't now see how I have got along so well without one so long, but I reckon as the old saying is, that poverty is the the State if we had took the money we are having to pay out for law suits and finished the State House with it, for I
